

Trioli — design Eero Aarnio, 2005

Trioli was created by Eero Aarnio, one of the absolute stars of Nordic design from the sixties on, and was awarded the Compasso d'Oro in 2008. It combines three different functions, and indeed, three different ways of viewing the world, into a single object. It is a children's chair (from the Magis Me Too collection) with two different seat height options (according to which way up it is positioned) and, turned on its front, it becomes a rocking horse. Playful, colourful and durable, Trioli is made of rotational-moulded polyethylene.
