vitra.

At Vitra we believe that homes are not simply defined by rooms and spaces but by how we live, work, dine, relax or even play in them.

A home gains its character through the people who live in it: a collage of personal choices, experiences and lifestyles.

This too is the story of the Vitra Home Collection: a mix of classic and contemporary design pieces that come with their unique and original stories, stories that will keep growing with you and your home.

Panton Chair & Panton Chair Classic
Verner Panton, 1959/1999

Verner Panton developed the iconic Panton Chair (1959/60) as the first all-plastic cantilever chair molded in a single piece. Panton Chair Classic is the original version of the chair with a glossy lacquer finish. New plastics technology later enabled the development of the Panton Chair made of dyed-through polypropylene with a lustrous matte finish.

Panton Chair

‘Rolf [Fehlbaum, son of the Vitra founding family] came to visit us one day and spotted a prototype of the Panton chair. It wasn’t stable enough to sit on. Rolf asked: “Why isn’t this chair being manufactured?” I answered, “Fifteen to twenty manufacturers have tried it but have all rejected the project for different reasons.” A well-known American designer – not Eames – even declared that something like that shouldn’t be called a “chair” – claiming it was not suitable to sit on. Rolf was immediately on the phone to a Vitra technician, Manfred Diebold. [...] Without Rolf there would have been no Panton Chair.’

Verner Panton

The history of the Panton Chair dates back to the latter half of the 1950s, when Danish designer Verner Panton developed the idea of a plastic cantilever chair. However, manufacturers did not want to pursue this daring concept. Willi Fehlbaum, the founder of Vitra, was interested in the idea but only agreed to it when Rolf Fehlbaum and the head of product development, Manfred Diebold, paid a visit to Panton and returned with glowing reports.

1963 marked the start of a collaboration between Vitra and Verner Panton with the development of one of the most iconic chair designs of the 20th century. It turned out to be a nearly impossible challenge, as the bold contours imagined by the designer had to be reconciled with the physical limits of plastics technology and manufacturing requirements. It involved several years of research, testing, discarded designs and continuous prototype development: the final shape of the chair was the culmination of ten prototypes made of manually laminated, glass-fibre reinforced polyester. Verner Panton and Vitra developers worked persistently and steadfastly on the project, sacrificing their evenings and weekends.

A small pilot series of just 150 pieces was manufactured in 1967 using cold-pressed, glass-fibre reinforced polyester. It was the first all-plastic chair to be made in one piece with a cantilever design. Its sculptural shape in Panton's trademark vibrant color caused quite a sensation. However, the costly and complex procedure made it impossible to keep up with the ensuing demand. After further tests with rigid polyurethane foam from Bayer proved successful, mass production commenced with an innovative molding technique in 1968. This yielded larger quantities but still required time-consuming manual finishing.

Verner Panton and Vitra were not satisfied with the status quo and continued to search for better alternatives. They believed to have found a solution in a new thermoplastic material developed by BASF, as the injection molding process considerably reduced the need for finishing work. However, technology at that time did not enable variations in material thickness, which led to several modifications to the design – the most noticeable being a series of ridges in the transition zone between the base and seat. The material subsequently proved to be far less resistant to aging and weathering than was initially assumed, causing the chairs to break and threatening Vitra's image. Production was therefore discontinued in 1979. It took years for Vitra to recover from the shock of this quality defect. However, interest in the Panton Chair lived on over the years and Vitra resumed production in 1990 – returning to rigid polyurethane foam with its complex finishing, but greater resistance to breakage.

Further advancements in plastics technology and new injection molding options inspired Vitra and Panton to pick up the project again in the 1990s. Working closely together, they developed a new version made of polypropylene. Thirty years after the initial market launch, one of Panton's key goals was finally reached: the plastic chair as an affordable industrial product. Verner Panton died shortly before the chair was presented in 1999.

Vitra has manufactured the design – which can be found in numerous museums and exhibitions – in two models ever since: the Panton Chair Classic in rigid polyurethane foam with a glossy surface and the Panton Chair in polypropylene with a matte finish. Since 2007, the latter has also been available in a children's version, Panton Junior, in keeping with the designer's original plans.

Invest in an original, for it will always retain its worth. An imitation will never be anything but a copy, a stolen idea. Appreciate the differences – not just the quality and more obvious variances but also the sensory and emotional appeal of the authentic product. An original is a lifelong companion and may well outlive you to be gratefully received by the next generation. But that's a story for the future.

Verner Panton was an influential figure in the development of design during the 1960s and '70s. After moving to Switzerland in the early 1960s, the Danish designer became known for his inventive, novel ideas for furnishings, lighting and textiles. The masterful use of color was a hallmark of his work.

The Original is by Vitra

It all began in 1953: Willi Fehlbaum, the founder of Vitra, discovered chairs designed by Charles and Ray Eames on a trip to the USA and decided to become a furniture manufacturer. He met the designer couple in person a short time later and developed a lasting friendship that has shaped our company up to the present day. Since these beginnings, Vitra has maintained close relationships with its designers – whom we refer to as authors – and the outcome of these collaborations is always an original.

Together with the manufacturer, designers dedicate their time, expertise and craftsmanship to the development and launch of new products. They conceive objects that are more than mere things – this is their special talent. Their aim is to design a product that not only looks great but also creates a unique experience for the user. Other aspects, such as sustainability and longevity, are also integral to the design process. All of these factors enhance the appearance and value of the products as they age. Originals do not simply get older – they become more beautiful.

Taking all this into account at Vitra, we develop our products in Switzerland and manufacture them in Europe, or locally in the case of certain products for markets in Asia and North America. Thus, we can guarantee that they are made precisely as the author intended.

Invest in an original, for it will always retain its worth. An imitation will never be anything but a copy, a stolen idea. Appreciate the differences – not just the quality and more obvious variances but also the sensory and emotional appeal of the authentic product. An original is a lifelong companion and may well outlive you to be gratefully received by the next generation. But that’s a story for the future. # One day at the Vitra Campus

We invite you to visit the Vitra Campus and experience the world of Vitra: discover an unparalleled array of architecture, classic and contemporary furniture designs, showrooms, exhibitions and collections, shops and restaurants – all tucked away in the rolling landscape of Weil am Rhein in the south of Germany. #VitraCampus

Vitra Slide Tower (19)

The 30-metre-high Slide Tower by Carsten Höller is situated along the Álvaro-Siza-Promenade, which links the VitraHaus to the Fire Station by Zaha Hadid. Accessible in fine weather, the free-standing work of art offers an exceptional view of the Vitra Campus and a thrilling experience on the 44-metre-long corkscrew slide.

Vitra Schaudapot (21)

The cornerstone of the Vitra Design Museum's work is its unique collection, which ranks among the most important holdings of furniture design worldwide. It contains some 7000 pieces of furniture, over 1000 lighting objects, as well as the estates of several famous designers. Since 2016, part of the collection has been on show in the Vitra Schaudapot, built by Herzog & de Meuron: a select assortment of design products is available in the Schaudapot shop and the neighbouring Depot Deli offers a delicious variety of dishes.

Fire Station (8)

Designed by Zaha Hadid, the Fire Station on the Vitra Campus was the Iraqi-British architect's first major built work. The jaggedly expressive volumes contrast with the orthogonal order of the adjacent factory buildings, like an explosion frozen in time. The sculpture-like structure was originally used to house a company fire brigade.

Blockhaus (22), Ruisseau (23), Ring (24)

In June 2018, three further objects were added to the campus: Blockhaus, a small building by German artist Thomas Schütte, along with the landscape interventions Ruisseau and Ring by Ronan and Erwan Bouroullec.

Vitra Design Museum (4), Vitra Design Museum Gallery (12)

Opened in 1989, the Vitra Design Museum has since become one of the world's leading design museums. It is dedicated to the research and presentation of design, past and present, and examines its relationship to architecture, art and everyday culture. The museum hosts several major exhibitions in the main building by Frank Gehry every year, which then travel to renowned museums throughout the world. The adjacent Vitra Design Museum Gallery features current perspectives.

VitraHaus (14)

The VitraHaus, built by Herzog & de Meuron, serves as Vitra's flagship store and is a source of inspiration for the home. It showcases the entire Vitra Home Collection. Enjoy the view from the Loft before setting off to explore all four floors. We are happy to advise you; furniture and accessories can be ordered or purchased directly in the VitraHaus. The shop on the ground floor offers a large selection of home accessories, publications and design objects. Refreshments and regional specialities are on sale in the VitraHaus Café.

My #VitraCampus moment

1 I really like the fact that the factory building looks almost like a museum for modern art (Marek Jarosz / @marekjarosz) 2 My girlfriend Neele and I kicked off our road trip through Europe by fulfilling a long-time wish: a visit to the Vitra Campus. (Sebastian Wenger / @eshoin22) 3 Stepping out of the VitraHaus lift, my friend Christine and I were greeted by the giant fox. We thought it was great and would have loved to have taken the fox home with us. So we took this lovely photo. (Noreen Lembke and Christine Schell / @esmiraldavondekker) 4 I had a lot of fun on the Vitra Campus with my design and architecture friends (Linny Sze / @szelanny) 5 I was at last able to visit the Vitra Campus. I was completely overcome and felt like a child in a playground. (Jay, Hyuk Joo Kwon / @seesawjoo)
